Government and Business Team Up for National Security Research

Ethan Muntz, Strategic Threat Intelligence Analyst in Health-ISAC's Threat Operations Center in Orlando, was accepted into the Public-Private Analytic Exchange Program (AEP) - a Department of Homeland Security (DHS) initiative that unites government analysts with private sector experts to tackle pressing national security challenges. Over an eight-month period, teams dive into topics of interest and produce intelligence reports that can be shared broadly.

Muntz joins the "US-China Competition: Tools of Power and Impacts" AEP team. He's diving deeper into intelligence and analytic practices and collaborating with other experienced analysts in US-China relations. Through the AEP, Muntz increases his knowledge about Chinese foreign policy, new analytical techniques, and enhanced expertise in China affairs. The program deepens his intelligence analyst skills and helps Health-ISAC produce better reports for our Members.
